

Water restrictions next week

TERRACE — Anyone planning to put in a new lawn this year best do it now.

That's the advice from engineering director Stew Christensen as the city prepares to introduce sprinkler restrictions.

The restrictions take hold next Tuesday, June 15 and the first to feel them will be people living in even-numbered houses.

As in previous years, the cut backs allow odd-numbered houses to use sprinklers only on odd-numbered days, even-numbered houses on even-numbered days.

These restrictions are not as stringent as those brought in last year. Then, again on June 15, the odd-even formula was also used but with an additional limitation of 6-10 a.m. only.

Tougher measures are inevitable, Christensen warned.

That's because once the city's main water supply from Deep Creek dries up, it depends on the Skeena River pumps.

They can only supply 16 million litres a day and that figure has already been hit once so far this spring.

Even a generally wet summer will not stop the tighter restrictions coming in, Christensen said. Deep Creek, he explained, relies on snow melt for its peak flows.

With snow packs in the watershed well below normal and disappearing fast, that means once the snow is gone only rain run-off keeps the creek level up.

With no reservoir to collect that run-off, when it stopped raining the creek started going down almost immediately.

Christensen pointed out a three or four day hot spell would see a dry creek at the same moment everyone started using their sprinklers again.

Given it would take too much time to get the word out about new and tougher restrictions, he said the only solution was to anticipate the problem and have them in place in lots of time.

The city will wait as long as it could before shutting off the tap even more.

Last year 14 people were fined for ignoring the restrictions and one household had its water supply cut off.

Christensen pointed out people worried about their gardens and lawns drying out could still use a hand-held hose to do the watering.

The city may know next week whether it's going to get money from Victoria for its water well project.

Then again, it may not. Engineering director Stew Christensen said the last word from the province is to expected grant decisions in mid-June — "maybe"

The city is looking for a 50 per cent grant on the estimated $1.2 million project.

The well water is needed to bolster the city's present water supplies which cannot keep up with summer demand.

And in the long term the extra water will be necessary to meet the increased demand that will come with continued population growth.

Council has indicated the project will not go ahead unless the province comes up with half the money.

Christensen said Victoria has received 50 per cent grant applications totalling $114 million, more than double the amount available this year.

With the provincial government having said priority will be given to projects tackling health or environmental concerns, the city is playing up that side of the project.

Christensen said it was pointing to the purity of well water and the contrasting health concerns associated with surface water.

The city has set aside money in this year's budget to carry out design work on the well, to be located at the corner of Frank St. and Hwy16 West.

If the grant comes through, Christensen said the well could be in production sometime next year.

Stop wanted on sewer vote this Saturday

TERRACE — Opponents of the proposed Queensway sewer system are seeking a court injunction to stop a referendum scheduled for Saturday.

Queensway area voters will decide June 12 whether or not to go ahead with a $1.9 million low pressure sewer system.

"We are seeking legal advice and we are willing to take it as far as we need to," said Lowrie resident Laurel Donaldson, one of the members of the 'No' side.

She said homeowners opposed to the project raised $2,000 at a meeting last Thursday night to hire a lawyer to fight the referendum.

They contend that renters should not be allowed to vote in the referendum because they don't have to pay the capital costs of installing the system.

Donaldson, one of the homeowners who has a brand new septic system, fears renters — in particular trailer park residents — will push the referendum through because they have nothing to lose.

"It's a quick fix solution to these 15 houses down on Bobsien," she said.

Donaldson says Bobsien Crescent is the worst affected area and that the regional district is making a tax grab by proposing a system taking in the rest of Queensway and Churchill Drive.

Proponents of the system contend there are failed septic systems all through the proposed sewer area.

"There are problems all over Thornhill," Donaldson replies. "Why don't we do all of Thornhill?"

"We are being made to pay for the problems of Bobsien because we happen to live nearby."

Regional district administrator Bob Marcellin says the matter of who gets to vote in the referendum is not negotiable.

Under the Municipal Act, all "electors" are eligible to vote.

An elector is defined as anyone who is 19 years of age, a Canadian citizen, a B.C. resident for at least six months and either a homeowner, tenant, or someone who has resided in the affected area for three months.

"It's not going to come for all of Thornhill," says Thornhill regional district director Les Watmough.

Les Watmough

"We finally had to go with something that will solve the majority of the problem."

The municipal affairs ministry approved a rare 75 per cent subsidy for the sewer project for the Queensway-Churchill Drive area only, he said.

Municipal affairs rejected a plan to include an oversized main line in the project to accommodate future expansion to include the rest of Thornhill.

"I understand that some people have perfectly good systems. I feel sorry for those people," Watmough says. "But we finally had to go with something that will solve the majority of the problem."

Watmough and others have been trying to get a sewer system for the Queensway area for more than 10 years.

"If this referendum fails I don't know what the hell to do," Watmough says. "I hope it passes."

The low-pressure sewer system proposed for the Queensway and Churchill Drive areas would cost each resident either $350 per year over 20 years, or else a $2,770 up-front payment.

They would also pay an estimated $150 per year for operating and maintenance, and they'd have to pay around $1,000 each for hookup to the system.

It would still require residents to maintain a septic tank, which would pump out sewage to the main sewer line.

Customized service

WELCOME BACK to B.C. sign greets those leaving Hyder, Alaska for Stewart. But failure to report tobacco and alcohol purchases to Canada Customs means trouble if you run into RCMP Constable Dave Smith. He's been concentrating on smuggling lately and has several large seizures to his credit. See story on Page A2.

Councils debate Shames debt

TERRACE — City councils in Terrace and Kitimat are debating whether the Kitimat-Stikine regional district should accept shares in Shames Mountain Ski Corporation.

Their decisions will determine what path the regional district will take in settling a $345,000 outstanding loan Shames owes the regional district for Kitsumkalum ski equipment it bought in 1986.

To date Shames has any interest on the loan. It missed a $35,000 interest payment due Jan. 1.

The two councils are considering two options: renegotiate the repayment schedule for the fifth time or accept preferred shares in the corporation.

The regional district directors from Terrace and Kitimat areas will bring a recommendation back to the regional district board meeting June 26.

Thornhill area director Les Watmough says directors have already rejected the idea of forgiving the loan altogether as well as the option of calling the loan.

If the loan was called, Shames might go bankrupt and the regional district would then likely get no money, because it gave up first position in the line of secured creditors to enable Shames to get a $502,000 federal-provincial loan, said Watmough.

"That doesn't help anybody," Watmough said. "We don't really consider it an option."

"Preferred shares or the status quo — that's basically what it boils down to."

Watmough floated another idea — which was rejected by other directors — that involves selling the loan to the Royal Bank which has also lent the ski corporation money.

The regional district would get a negotiated percentage of its money back and in exchange the bank would take over the loan.

"I think we should look seriously and see if there is a way to get out of it and let someone else worry about it," Watmough said.

He says money from the Shames loan could be used to pay down the regional district's $300,000 accumulated debt that taxpayers are still paying off for the defunct Kitsumkalum ski hill.

"It's a nightmare that keeps coming back," Watmough said.

"Somewhere, somebody has to be firm about this."

The regional district has already renegotiated the loan with Shames four times, and has forgiven $100,000 worth of interest.

The current arrangement required Shames to begin annual interest payments this year and to start paying off the principal in 1995.

"How long do we keep forgiving and forgiving and forgiving?" Watmough said. "That's taxpayers money."

Any option the regional district decides upon will have to be approved by the ministry of municipal affairs.

Watmough said talks are planned with Shames Mountain to get the company's perspective.

Duo seek NDP nod Smuggling snuffed

TERRACE — With the Skeena nomination meeting less than a month away, there are still only two contenders for the New Democrat candidacy in the federal election.

Kitimat resident Norm Lavallee having already declared his intention to seek the nomination, Prince Rupert councillor John Kuz has thrown his hat into the ring.

Business agent for local 2000 of the United Food and Commercial Workers union, Kuz has sat on the coast city's council for the past four years.

He also sits on the North Coast Fisheries advisory board and is a fisheries advisor to both the federal and provincial governments on free trade and GATT issues.

Manning to visit

TERRACE — Reform Party leader Preston Manning will visit Terrace next Wednesday.

He will be here to officially open the party's Terrace campaign office for the upcoming federal election.

It's the fourth time in five years Manning has visited Terrace.

He arrives at the campaign office on Lazelle Ave. at 12:30 p.m., June 16, after a visit to Kitimat.

He'll field questions from the public and media after making a speech at 12:50 p.m., and then will do a short walk around town before leaving for Prince George.

STEWART — The next time you visit this community you could meet Constable Dave Smith at his pearly gates.

That's what he calls the avalanche barriers on the only highway to the outside.

It's where Smith lies in wait for people who haven't declared goods bought in Hyder, the tiny Alaskan neighbour to Stewart.

There isn't a customs post on the border between the two communities.

It's a temptation for people who take advantage of low American prices for tobacco and alcohol and who then don't want to pay duty.

There is a sign on the Stewart side of the border telling people to call a toll-free number to declare their goods but Smith finds amazing the number of people who say they didn't notice it.

"That's why we set up outside of town. We give people every chance to stop and phone. By the time they reach the pearly gates, there aren't any more phones," says Smith.

Since last fall Smith's efforts have resulted in several major seizures of tobacco, alcohol and vehicles from people deliberating trying to avoid paying duty.

"What happens is that people come up here on a shopping trip. They come up with $5,000 or $10,000 in cash. At $30 a carton in Hyder, that's a lot of cigarettes. A person can make $3,000 or $4,000 on a trip by reselling them. It's all tax free," said Smith.

He knows the amount seized isn't close to what is smuggled across but hopes word spreads fast about the implications of not making declarations.

"The penalty is laid against the conveyance — the vehicle. We seize the vehicle until the penalty is paid," said Smith.

Penalties are assessed on a sliding scale. The more that's seized the more a person pays. And there is a minimum penalty of $100.

Generally, the amount is $40 for each carton of cigarettes or cans of tobacco seized. For those who buy Canadian cigarettes in Hyder at an average cost of $30 each, the end result is expensive.

It can also be very inconvenient if those caught do not have the cash on hand. The vehicle remains seized until the penalty is paid.

"We don't take Visa. We don't take Mastercard," said Smith.

Compounding the situation is a cut in hours at Stewart's only bank, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

It's now open only three afternoons a week, meaning a long wait for those who need cash for the penalties.

Stewart RCMP on occasion do let people keep their vehicles and continue on their trip.

But they are given notice to pay the penalty as soon as they return home. Failure to do that results in a tow truck showing up at their front door.

But there is a magic number after which the vehicle is not only seized and a penalty assessed but charges laid under the Excise Act. The magic number is 40 cartons, 40 cans of tobacco and 40 bottles of alcohol or any combination of the above coming out at 40.

There is no obligation on the part of Hyder merchants to report large tobacco purchases made by Canadians. The onus to report purchases falls upon the person when returning to Canada.

One Hyder outlet, the Border Bandit, stamps the toll-free Canada Customs number on sales receipts.

Yet Smith does say he may not be very popular in Hyder as seizures could be taken as hurting business.

Some of the larger seizures involve cartons still in the shipping boxes sent directly from tobacco companies to Hyder stores.

Smith found himself in a position to concentrate on smuggling last year when Stewart's population dropped and with it, activity generating police work.

"Customs and Excise in Prince Rupert said it was easy work," added Smith.

There is a lot of paperwork involved in each seizure but Smith has refined what is required and has the appropriate forms built into a program on his home computer.

Calculations of revenue lost to the provincial and federal governments from cigarette smuggling are hard to come by. But there is one estimate of between $1.5 million and $2 million a year for undeclared goods leaving Hyder for Canada.

Two weeks ago the provincial government estimated it loses $21 million a year from smuggling.

Bevan returned

TERRACE — The Kiselas band council and chief councillor have been swept from office.

Mel Bevan is the new chief councillor and Winnie Wells, Joanne McKay and Kenneth McDames are the new band councillors.

Bevan was elected last Friday with 44 votes, defeating incumbent chief councillor Ralph Wright by a wide margin.

Bevan, a former chief councillor, had been defeated by Wright in elections two years ago.

Wright then became the target of a protest accusing the band council of incompetence.

A majority of band members signed a petition demanding

Wright step down. He refused and both a band office sit-in and a rent strike failed to unseat him.

The three incumbent band councillors — Wilfred Bennett, Ray Seymour Sr. and Brian Seymour — were also defeated.

Turnout for the election was 93 per cent, with 82 out of 89 eligible voters casting ballots.

Four other candidates challenged Wright for the chief councillor's seat — Andrew Bevan, Debbie Moore, Ron Nyce, and Ray Seymour Sr.

Nyce led last year's protest against the band council.

Fifteen people ran for the three band council seats.

The new band council is elected for a two-year term.

MP bags $2.8m pension

TERRACE — Retiring Skeena NDP MP Jim Fulton will collect a pension worth more than $2.8 million by the time he reaches 75, estimates a national organization.

The National Citizens Coalition, which pushes for less government spending, based its calculations on Fulton's years of service and contributions to the MPs' pension plan.

The amount going to Fulton places him fourth among 48 MPs retiring this year who qualify for pension payments.

Fulton, 43, was first elected in May 1979. MPs qualify after serving for six years and begin collecting immediately after leaving office regardless of age.

National Citizens Coalition spokesman Jeff Ball estimates Fulton's yearly pension income at $39,705 until he reaches age 60.

"The inflation clock starts ticking right away, Fulton won't get an increase until he reaches 60. But then it increases according to the amount of inflation between his retirement and age 60," said Ball.

"The cost of living could have easily doubled during that time and Fulton could then be collecting $78,000 a year and it'll continue to rise each year after that with inflation," Ball added.

National Citizens Coalition calculations are based on average annual inflation of five per cent as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

"I realize that inflation is low right now, but actuaries tell us five per cent is a reasonable average annual amount," said Ball.

The coalition estimated Fulton's pension payments as of last September.

MPs contribute 11 per cent of their annual salary of approximately $65,000 to the pension plan. They are banned from contributing to RRSPs or to other pension plans.

The National Citizens Coalition and others have criticized the MPs' pension plan because of the amount of taxpayers' money needed to top it up.

Topping the list of retiring MPs this year is cabinet minister Robert de Cotret. He'll receive an estimated $3.2 million by the time he reaches 75.

Joe Clark ranks second with an estimated payout of $3.115 million.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, with nine years in Parliament, will get $1.124 million by the time he reaches 75.

But Mulroney also qualifies for payments amounting to two-thirds of what the Prime Minister in 2003 makes. That's the year Mulroney reaches 65 years of age.

Ten million trees

TREE PLANTER and forests minister Dan Miller plants a very special tree in the Alice Creek area June 2. It was the ten millionth tree planted by Skeena Cellulose in the Terrace and Nass areas since 1986. In Kamloops on June 5, Miller anchored the three billionth tree planted in B.C. since 1930.

Local makes pitch for a Senate seat

Dave Menzies

TERRACE — Dave Menzies wants the gravy train to stop at his front door.

An unemployed bush pilot, Menzies phoned Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's office a couple of weeks ago to inquire about how to become a Senator.

"I was listening to the radio the other day and old Myron Baloony appointed a guy who managed a hotel," said Menzies.

"So I'm sitting here, basically out of work, and I figure I'd be a better Senator than most of those other goofs they've got in there."

"For what the Senate is supposed to be, a chamber of sober second thought and all that, you don't have to face the electorate. You get to look at legislation on its own merits and not have to worry about votes.

"I figure to fill up the Senate with intelligent and honourable people would be a difficult thing. I think it needs people such as myself who are cynical and who have no affiliation with a political party," said Menzies.

Menzies was told to send a letter to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's office for consideration. Mulroney has the final say in appointments.

He said his campaign also stands as an example for ridding the country of something that doesn't work.

Then again, Menzies just may be in luck. There is one vacancy among the six Senate seats allocated to B.C.

To qualify, a person must be a Canadian citizen and reside in the province he or she wants to represent.

They must be at least 30 years old, have assets of at least $4,000 and have at least $4,000 worth of real estate.

There is an annual salary of $64,800 and a tax-free allowance of $10,100. Free transportation is included and is office space and a budget for staff.

Senators must retire at age 75 but do qualify for a pension after that.

There are a number of vacancies overall and these are expected to be filled by the time Mulroney leaves office.

Circling wagons

Call it a matter of circling the wagons or call it an ambush. The meetings in Stewart the end of May on the Nisga'a land claim proved a fascinating exercise in politics and in game playing.

In one corner were the Nisga'a, federal and provincial negotiators. In the other corner was everybody else — each with a particular agenda but combined in one theme of "just what the heck is going on here."

The result was the realization that all three parties in the negotiation have a lot of work awaiting them in explaining what they are trying to do. They must also realize that there are people who do not even accept the concept that land claims negotiations are needed in the first place. That's crucial because any claims deal not understood or supported by all concerned doesn't have a solid chance at succeeding.

Just as important is the stake all the other people in the northwest have in any eventual land claims settlements. The people in Stewart, for example, have just as many emotional and other connections with the land, its use and decision making as do native groups.

One telling point surrounding the Nisga'a land claim is the semi-alliance formed between the Gitanyow who say the Nisga'a claim land that is rightfully theirs and those in Stewart who do not accept the concept of land claims. This falls under the old tag of "the enemy of my enemy is my friend." Such alliances are ones of convenience but this one could prove an irritation point to the negotiators.

Above all else, the meetings in Stewart may have an unintended side effect. And that is to draw the federal, provincial and Nisga'a negotiators closer together. They already operate in another world of shared language, experiences and nuances unknown to the vast majority of residents.

What could happen now is an increased sense of isolation on the part of the negotiators. That's something the federal and provincial negotiators will have to watch carefully. The more they are drawn together, the more chances there are of a striking a deal that won't be accepted.

And this goes back to the heart of land claims negotiations. A continued lack of communication on their purpose will mean bad news in the end.

Queen Elizabeth

A tip of the royal hat to Queen Elizabeth II who last week marked 40 years on the throne. It was a decidedly low key celebration in recognition no doubt of the astounding number of problems she has had to face in the last while.

One common theme is that the monarchy costs a lot of money in a country and in a commonwealth where money is scarce and needs are great. The image of a singular group of people living high off the old hog doesn't sit well. Another common theme is that of marital and personal problems in the royal family. The unsatiable appetite for gossip and the sheer delight of people who live to feed off the misfortunes of others has propelled this to gross heights of excess and of stupidity.

Any hint of legitimacy attached to the above should not detract from the essential nature of the monarchy and its place in our system of government. The monarchy either directly or indirectly through a governor general or a lieutenant governor represents the rock-solid stability of how we are governed.

To be sure, the role is mainly ceremonial and we rightfully have a system of directly elected representation. Yet there remains a place for an office or person with whom rests the authority to have an influence or say in what goes on.

A very recent example in B.C. concerned former premier Bill Vander Zalm and the number of allegations that swirled around him while he was in office. Had Mr. Vander Zalm not resigned in 1991, there was every indication Lieutenant-Governor David Lam would have exercised his office by removing Mr. Vander Zalm.

Recipe for teachers

Listening to reports of teachers' contract negotiations makes you think you've tuned in to a Julia Child cooking lesson or a workshop on poverty. It's more like a chef's convention than a discussion of educational issues.

School boards speak of trimming the fat and steam about inability to pay. There's talk of COLA clause. Why, there's even a "fudge factor" which allows school districts to exceed class sizes by 10 per cent.

The similarities between achieving a contract and cooking a meal are many. In meal making, the cook decides on a menu, shops for ingredients, prepares individual dishes, and finally arranges them for the family's approval.

Likewise, teachers decide what gains they need, bargain for acceptance of their proposals, then present a package to their membership for a vote.

Both tasks are never-ending. Contracts take so long to achieve and are so retroactive, no sooner is one signed than it's time to begin negotiating the next one. It's as if issues are deliberately held over from this contract to ferment until the next one, like sourdough starter. Thus our schools are forever in a stew.

Throughout contract talks, each side tries to act big cheese while characterizing their own demands as small

Through Bifocals

by Claudette Sandeck

potatoes. Negotiations simmer by degrees, supper in a slow cooker. From time to time, like communal cooks pooling their welfare money, the two sides get together to stir the clauses, taste the contract mix, and agree when to reconvene.

When - not if - contract talks break down, teachers march for fitness up and down past their respective schools in what is called a strike though it quite resembles a food bank breadline. Mobile, they present less of a target to upset students and parents, and even this snail's pace blurs them in the labour minister's vision.

In the end, the way a head chef breezes into a restaurant kitchen to dribble the crowning seasoning into a dish, a mediator adds minute improvements to make a contract palatable to both antagonists.

In fact, unknown to the seeing public, the mediator may also administer a smart whack with a spatula. This has the same effect as a sharp thump to the bottom of a ketchup bottle, reducing resistance faster than meat tenderizer on a tough steak.

Because of the relentless repetition of this conflict pattern throughout all 75 B.C. school districts, we should shorten the school year to nine months, institute province wide bargaining, and declare May to be Teachers' Strike Month. Now, there's food for thought.

Savings in lawyers' and mediators' fees would easily fund most of the classroom improvements our education system has an appetite for, without thinning taxpayers' wallets to Wiener schnitzels.

VICTORIA — I've got some unsolicited advice for Liberal leadership hopeful Gordon Campbell: get your brother off the campaign team. And while you're at it, make him stand in the corner until he learns the difference between journalism and muck-raking.

Michael Campbell is the editor of Equity, a Vancouver business magazine whose current edition sports one of the most offensive covers I've ever had the misfortune to lay eyes on.

The cover features a doctored photo of Premier Harcourt and finance minister Glen Clark in brown military shirts with leather straps crossing their chests. Clark is wearing a gun. The photo montage goes with an article criticizing the NDP for its attack on wealth.

Asked about the photo, Harcourt was visibly angered. The close resemblance of the uniform the magazine put on him to that worn by Nazi brownshirts wasn't lost on the premier.

He said he found the picture offensive in the extreme.

His father, he said, fought in the Second World War, and he had fought for democracy during his career.

"It's unfortunate that Gordon Campbell's campaign worker, his brother Mike Campbell, is bringing back the Bud Smith style of politics to this province. I don't think British Columbians want to see that happen," Harcourt said.

Asked for comment, Equity staff member Ashley Ratee admitted that Michael Campbell "most likely played a role" in the unsigned article, but he rejected charges that the uniforms on the cover resemble Nazi attire.

Well, Mr. Ratee, I recognize Nazi uniforms when I see them. And these are most definitely the uniforms worn by the S.A., an acronym for

From the Capital

by Hubert Beyer

Sturm Abteilung, loosely translated as Storm Troops.

I was there, Mr. Ratee, when the men wearing the same brownshirts you put on the premier and the finance minister looted the homes of Jews during the Kristallnacht. I was there when they arrested not only Jews, but also the Social Democrats, whose political philosophy was pretty well identical to that this country's NDP.

Don't tell me those shirts on your magazine's cover aren't Nazi shirts. I'm not buying your diatribe about "visual presentation of an attack on success."

If Gordon Campbell doesn't know it yet, I can tell him that this nasty little episode can't help but hurt his campaign for the leadership of the provincial Liberal party. Canadians may be tolerant, but not to the extent of tolerating this garbage.

I would be very surprised if Equity's advertising revenue dropped off for a while. I would think that even the die-hard right-wing business community doesn't want to be linked with such cheap and offensive attacks on the government.

Things like this also don't do much to enhance the image of journalism which a somewhat tarnished at the best of times. And if other news outlets have the slightest regard for the need of journalistic impartiality, they will reassess their association with Michael Campbell.

Campbell can be seen daily on BCTV, giving what he would like viewers to believe is an impartial and apolitical view of matters economic. He can also be heard regularly on CKNW radio in the capacity of economic commentator.

You may think that I'm making too much of this, but I think not. I felt the same way on a number of previous occasions, and expressed my anger. When during the restraint days of Bill Bennett, posters were distributed showing the premier adorned with Third Reich uniform and regalia, giving the Nazi salute. A few years later, Rita Johnston, during her short-lived career as premier, gave a speech in which she compared the NDP to the Nazis. I pointed out on that occasion how offensive her remarks were, in light of the persecution Germany's Social Democrats had suffered at the hands of the Nazis.

And finally, I recall Bill Vander Zalm's ill-conceived remarks that our system of justice reminded him of Nazi Germany, a strange statement coming from a premier, although I must say it was perhaps not so strange coming from this particular premier.

No matter how much we may dislike a certain government, there is no excuse for likening it to the most ruthless state that ever existed. There are accepted parameters to any political debate, and they don't include the kind of journalistic trash that emanates from the cover of this month's issue of Equity.

If I were Harcourt, I would be furious. And if I were Gordon Campbell, I'd fire brother Mike from the campaign team.

Caledonia Graduation 1993

Grad night gala

Celebrations for Caledonia graduates were held June 4. Here are just some of the pictures from a giddy evening full of sweaty palms, flowing gowns and flashing cameras.

Speech! Speech! Speech!

Here is the valedictorian's speech given by Fraser McKay.

Good evening, parents, teachers, friends and fellow grads. Tonight we the class of '93 receive our diplomas, and with this little formality out of the way we have our entire lives ahead of us.

I'm sure many of us are asking ourselves "What exactly am I going to do after graduation?" As I stand here speaking to you, I wonder, I wonder about what these people behind me will someday become. When I look at one face, I see the face of a doctor, although at the moment I'd have to say that I'd be a wee bit apprehensive at the thought of letting one of my classmates operate on me.

I remember not so long ago sitting in my grade seven class with some of my friends trying to figure out what year we'd be graduating in. Well, it turned out to be 1993 (for most of us). We figured it out then as a curiosity, but in what seems too short a time, that curiosity has become a reality.

Throughout our years of school together, we've gotten to know each other - some of us forming long lasting relationships, some of us merely saying excuse me as we brush by one another in the hallway.

Now that we are on the threshold of graduation, and now that we won't see each other five days a week, I think to myself, some of these people I will probably never know, and that thought makes me sad. But then I think again, and I realize that the special thing that we share tonight during these ceremonies, the thing that goes beyond a diploma and beyond a gown, lets me know each and every one of you for a brief instant, as we share the same feeling of pride and fulfillment.

We have many memories of our school years, both fond and embarrassing. And though the sounds of the school bells may fade as we walk down our separate paths into the future, the memories, be they happy or sad, shall stay with us for the rest of our lives.

Congratulations to the class of '93 - I am proud to have been a part of your class, and may you achieve through hard work and determination whatever your hearts desire.

Fraser McKay

Pension

Jim Fulton is the Member of Parliament for Skeena.

He is retiring.

Fulton will get a pension. It will be $39,000 a year.

When Fulton is 60 years old, the pension will increase.

People say the pension will amount to $2.8 million.

Smokes

People go to Hyder, Alaska to buy cigarettes. They are cheaper in the United States than in Canada.

But people do not want to pay duty when they return to Canada.

So the police in Stewart set up roadblocks.

People caught with cigarettes must pay fines.

They also lose the cigarettes. Some people have their vehicles seized. And if people are caught with a lot of cigarettes, they can face criminal charges.

The man in the picture is Constable Dave Smith from Stewart.

He is the person who stops a lot of people.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Centre helps young people

Students look for work

TERRACE — Every summer, high school and college students embark on job searches, hoping to find employment in an increasingly sparse job market.

And every summer Canada Employment Centres for Students have played a big role in these searches.

This year Gurmit Grewal is the student placement officer at the Terrace centre. It's open until Aug. 15.

Grewal helps secondary and post-secondary students find employment, provides information to potential employers, and posts job orders.

She also holds group and individual information sessions. She helps develop resumes and cover letters, and fills students in on interview skills and job-searching techniques.

Since Grewal's main duty is to help students, it's fitting that she's one herself. She attended Northwest Community College, and will be going to UBC in the fall to complete her chemistry studies.

"When employers hire a student, they're investing in a potential future employee, they're investing in the future of their company, they're investing in the future of Terrace," said Grewal.

In the first week, 119 students registered at the centre, although only 13 job vacancies had appeared by May 18. Employment officer Candace Pritchard notes that the program is still in its beginning stages, and that more jobs will appear throughout the summer. Last year, the centre placed 202 students with employers.

While wages vary, most jobs offer between $6 and $7 per hour. Grewal added that many jobs are services or sales positions.

Some employers participate in Challenge '93, a federal program that provides government subsidies for private, public and non-profit organizations so they can afford student employment.

This year, $82,373 was provided to help pay for costs, and 50 Terrace jobs have been approved to participate in the program.

The federal student placement service began when an overwhelming amount of baby-boomer graduates flooded the job market.

OUT AND ABOUT

TERRACE — The start of the tourist season gets its official kick off June 19 with the Terrace and District Chamber of Commerce's Howdoyoudo Day open house at the travel infocentre.

Located in the log building on Keith Ave., the infocentre serves as the tourism information reference point during the summer season.

From 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. the centre will give away flowers, balloons and much more.

There'll be a new travel agency in town when Kelly and Diane Francis open the doors of Uniglobe Courtesy Travel the first week of August.

Diane Francis has been manager of Terrace Bowling Lanes. Kelly Francis will remain at Terrace Builders Do-it Centre.

Uniglobe was founded in Vancouver in 1980 and has more than 1,065 outlets in Canada, the United States and the United Kingdom.

Diane Francis says she became interested in Uniglobe after deciding she wanted to go into business for herself.

The agency will be located at 4718 Lazelle Ave., next door to Central Flowers.

The Terrace and District Chamber of Commerce holds its elections of officers at a luncheon June 17.

Also speaking will be provincial Liberal party leadership candidate Gordon Gibson.

The installation of officers takes place June 26 at a banquet.

The banquet will also feature a roast of this year's business executives of the year — George and Gail Munson.

There's a new restaurant in the area.

The Tree House is located at the Desiderata Inn, near the intersection of Hwys 16 and 37.

It's owned by Tom Kelch, formerly of the Quarterdeck and he's being assisted by Jim Lambert, who has been a chef for five years.

Lambert also owns the Medics Warehouse.

The name comes from the treed patio location of the restaurant, said Lambert.

New to the clothing business in the city is Drifters on Lakelse.

Owned by Jim Armstrong and Jim Murray, the store sells western wear.

It's located where Tam's once was.

Armstrong said he was looking for a business opportunity and decided on western wear to boost the selection in the area.

Working at the store are Armstrong and wife Bonnie.

A local alarm company has made it to the pages of a national trade magazine.

Lockport Security's installation of a radio frequency wireless alarm system at the big Prince Rupert Fisherman's Co-op plant along the waterfront in Prince Rupert earned it a two-page spread in Canadian Security.

The company not only installed an alarm system for the plant but used the same wireless technology to safeguard fishing boats tying up.

Lockport owner Joe Sullivan called it the largest installation of its kind in the northwest.

And the added aspect of providing security to fishing boats has lead the company to giving demonstrations of the same capability to truck fleets, said Sullivan.

Abortion issue referred

TERRACE — A request for women considering abortions to first be given information on its effects has been passed along.

The request was made by the local pro-life group to the Terrace Regional Health Care Society which runs Mills Memorial Hospital.

Society trustees heard a presentation made by the Terrace Pro-Life Education Association May 27.

They then decided to pass the request to the hospital's medical advisory committee which consists of the more than 25 physicians in the city, said Mills spokesman Michael Leisinger.

This isn't the first time the health care society has asked local doctors to consider the request to give information in writing on abortion to women considering the procedure.

The request stems from a recommendation in the coroner's report on the death of Myrna George, who had an abortion at Mills Memorial Hospital in 1991. Complications set in and she was sent to Vancouver General Hospital where she died.

The recommendation was directed at health minister Elizabeth Cull but also considered by the health care society and three local doctors, said Leisinger.

Those doctors recommended then that the subject of what is called informed consent remain a physician-patient matter.

The health care society accepted the recommendation.

"Given that it was three doctors then, the board decided now to have all the GPs and specialists on the medical advisory committee take a look at it," said Leisinger.

"So what the board has done now is to ask for further study," he said.

Terrace Pro-life Education Association president Darryl Anaka says its request carries the added weight of a 574-signature petition.

"It's the citizens who now want some action of that (coroner's recommendation)," said Anaka. "And it's on that basis that we made our request."

The association's statement to the health care society ran nearly three pages.

Its request was sparked by the death of George. Her family has now filed a lawsuit against the two physicians who treated her while she was at Mills.

"Written information on the nature and possible complications of the abortion procedure would ensure that women receive clear, consistent and thorough information on which to base their decision," the association's statement read.

Health group takes shape

TERRACE — What will be a community health council with decision making power is gradually taking shape.

More than 15 people meet next week to get results of a May 29 meeting which drew together ideas on how the council should work.

More than 50 people attended that May 29 meeting, said Dave Dennis, the area's manager of continuing care and official guiding the establishment of community health councils.

"If you look at it in terms of areas, there are two — membership and responsibilities," said Dennis following the May 29 meeting.

Those at the June 18 meeting will amalgamate the ideas gathered May 29. The amalgamation will then be the subject of another general meeting.

"This won't be the final document," said Dennis of next week's session. "There could very well be other ideas to go over."

Work on the community health council by a core group has been underway for some time.

This group drew together some of the major health care players in the area and follows the provincial government's plan called New Directions.

The plan sets out a gradual move toward local health care decision making culminating in 1996 when legislation of officially bring them into existence takes hold.

Community health councils are intended to draw together all health care bodies in the expectations of reducing rivalries, increase efficiencies and making better use of limited budgets.

Some of the members of the health council will be directly elected while others will be appointed.

Eventually, community health councils will be tied in with regional ones on broad decision making issues.

Dennis said the northwest is further along than other areas of the province in working toward health councils.

Suggested membership of the health councils includes local governments, hospitals, non-profit organizations, natives, physicians, low income people, seniors, police, churches and cultural groups.

Suggested council responsibilities include finding areas that need improvement, listing priorities and establishing effective communications between various groups.

Kitlope unique

Dear Sir:
The Kitlope watershed represents a small fraction of the wood (chips) that is required to run the Eurocan mill - I believe somewhere around 3 or 4 per cent.

Apparently the Wedene wood from Prince Rupert would replace the Kitlope wood as far as the sawlogs for Skeena Sawmills are concerned.

Understandably Eurocan doesn't want to lose that source of fibre without replacing it, but the impact is not quite as severe as they would have us believe.

But if you want to know what all the fuss is about concerning the Kitlope - go see it.

It is truly one of the most beautiful places on earth. It is majestic, wild, a land of sheer granite cliffs, countless waterfalls, with quiet power that exists in those places we love enough to cherish and protect.

It is no wonder the Haisla place such a high value on it, the value of life itself - it was, and is, home for some of them, and a home like no other.

And it is the last coastal watershed in B.C. of its size to remain essentially intact. Of the 25 largest coastal watersheds in B.C. it's the only one intact.

So to the share groups I have this to say; this is where I would like the sharing to start. You've got 24 watersheds, the rest of us want one.

The question that remains about the Kitlope is not whether we should preserve it; it is preserved now. The question is whether we will destroy it.

Bruce Hill,
Terrace, B.C.

Angler gets barb

Dear Sir:

I read Rob Brown's "Skeena Angler" periodically, hoping to pick up some tips on fishing.

As a rule, I have found it both interesting and informative. As a Christian however, I took particular offense at his May 26 entry.

I am also abhorred at the present state of the environment and the polluted water which many of our fellow human beings are forced to drink.

What I found offensive about Mr. Brown's article was his inference that Christianity is inherently an exploitative system insofar as the environment is concerned.

It is true that God gave man authority over the earth, along with His express permission to "subdue" it. However, he also commanded man to be a good steward of creation; to "tend" the garden and "take care of it" (Genesis 2:15).

There have been times when some Christians have emphasized "subduing" the earth (understand and use nature for man's benefit) rather than "tending" it.

I also admit that presently many Christians do not take time for environmental issues (it must be kept in mind, of course, that Christians are not alone here) or make a concerted effort to understand and do something constructive toward solving the present ecological crises. That bothers me.

However, this has not been exclusively the case on the part of all who profess faith in Christianity. Those who study the Bible on a deeper level can easily see that a truly biblical Christian world view is one which decries the exploitation of nature.

This is the view that I subscribe to and it irks me that Mr. Brown misinforms his reading audience in regard to what the biblical mandate really is.

It reflects a biased opinion (is it only Christianity that is exploitative here? What about exploitation of the environment in countries where Buddhism, Hinduism, Communism or other "religions" and ideologies dominate the culture) and a low standard of journalism. Are the comments Mr. Brown made really necessary for a good article?

Besides, our so called, "dominant religion" (Christianity) does not really dominate our culture anymore. We live in a pluralistic and very secular society. If you don't believe that, just try to institute morning prayer in the classrooms of our schools.

So, Mr. Brown, tell me more about the present ecological crises. I am concerned. However, if you cannot do so in a tasteful fashion, please limit your column to fishing information in the northwest.

Marvin R. Vold,
Terrace, B.C.

About day care

Dear Sir:

We were one of the concerned families that attended the city council meeting on April 5, 1993 to object to a day care business being built on R1 zone.

We bought property over 30 years ago to raise a family in a quiet neighbourhood and away from downtown business. What kind of a street would this be if everybody was allowed to have a business in their dwelling.

The concerned street is a busy one, with no side walks, school buses twice a day, children walking to and from school as there are schools at both ends of this dead end street.

At the meeting we attended, they said there would be eight children in their day care home. But their letter in the paper stated a 16-child day care business. What's stopping them from having 32 children to make more money.

This much traffic, twice a day, we don't need. They left the meeting very frustrated and some what angry. We all 15 felt the same way when the council did not reject the matter.

Why does our council bother making by-laws, then turns around and changes them to suit whoever.

We as tax payers think it's time for a new slate in our council.

Sincerely,
Reg and Marie Beckley,
Terrace, B.C.

Feds get slap on wrist

Kemano decision 'illegal'

TERRACE — The federal cabinet acted illegally when it exempted the Kemano Completion Project from a federal environmental review, a Senate-Commons committee has concluded.

The committee on the scrutiny of regulations handed down its report last Thursday on the exemption granted Alcan in 1990.

The report calls the federal government's action "illegal and subversive of constitutional government."

It goes on to call the government's explanation of why the exemption was given "dangerous nonsense."

Bulkley valley NDP MP Brian Gardiner, one of the MPs who sit on the committee, said the finding may be the weapon needed to force the federal government to join the province's environmental review of the project.

"It's a political mess," Gardiner said last week. "This report is one of the things that has brought the whole Kemano scandal to national attention."

"This points once again to how the government has proceeded in the wrong way with this project," he said.

"The federal government should join with the province and conduct a joint review and the feds should release all information they have on this project."

Opponents say the billion-dollar hydroelectric project could reduce water flows in the upper Nechako River to as little as 14 per cent of pre-1950 levels.

The committee report is at odds with the findings of the Federal Court of Appeal, which ruled cabinet did have the right to grant an exemption and — even if it didn't — the court found the federal Environmental Assessment and Review Process (EARP) guidelines didn't apply in the case of Kemano.

Gardiner concedes the report won't stop Alcan.

But he says it should be used to force the release of more information on Kemano and to prevent the government from playing fast and loose with the environment in the future.

The provincial review of Kemano — being conducted by the B.C. Utilities Commission — is to hold a series of community public hearings in the fall across northern B.C.

Technical hearings would take place later in the fall and the commission is to report its findings to cabinet by Dec. 31.

Major land claim appeal decision expected soon

TERRACE — The B.C. Court of Appeal will announce its decision on the landmark Gitksan-Wet'suwet'en land claims case the week of June 20, says the speaker for Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en hereditary chiefs.

Gordon Sebastian said his office expects to get 10 days' notice before the decision is handed down.

The case, Delgamuukw et al vs. the Queen, is one of eight native rights cases put before the same panel of five judges in the appeal court.

The other cases all involve fishing and hunting rights, Sebastian said. Chief Justice Allan McEachern two years ago in the B.C. Supreme Court dismissed the Gitksan-Wet'suwet'en suit, leading to the appeal.

Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en asked the court for a ruling on ownership of 22,000 square miles of northwestern B.C. centered on the Hazelton.

They also wanted damages for loss of land and resources transferred to third parties by the Crown.

The suit was first filed in 1985 with 374 days of trial taking place between 1987 and 1990. McEachern released his decision March 1991.

McEachern did find that the provincial government does have a responsibility to natives when development is proposed for unoccupied Crown land.

That fiduciary responsibility lead to the involvement of the Tsimshian and the Haisla in studies and committees concerning the Orenda Forest Products pulp and paper mill proposal.

Health centre opens soon

STEWART — The community's new health centre should be open for business by mid-August, says administrator Denise Moore.

Construction on the $4.68 million centre began last year. It's 2,300 square metres in size and is all on one floor.

It'll contain a hospital, room for the public health nurse, room for an alcohol and drug counsellor, the community's ambulance station, mental health office, doctor's clinic and dental offices.

Moore said the centre will serve as a welcome place from which community health services can operate.

"In a community of this size we need to have a flexible work force. Having all of these services together can do that," she said.

Although enough space is being set aside for eight hospital acute care beds, only three will be set up when the facility opens.

That fits the provincial government guidelines of having 2.75 beds for every 1,000 people in the area a hospital services.

"When we demonstrate a need, it will be able to expand," said Moore.

"Stewart has a history of going up and down in population. This facility is being structured for a population of between 500 people or up to 5,000," she added.

There will also be two long term care beds.

Also going into the hospital section is a two-bed emergency ward and a birthing room.

The facility will bring together those health service elements now scattered throughout the community and replace a converted apartment building that now serves as Stewart's hospital.

The hospital moved into the apartment building in early 1991 after a propane explosion damaged the structure in which it was located.

That old building has since been removed and the new centre is going in on the site.

Liberals meeting

TERRACE — Federal liberals meet here June 12 as part of the run up leading to choosing a candidate for the next election.

Representatives from communities in the Skeena riding will talk about issues, said riding association president Barry Pankhurst.

There'll also be a meeting of provincial Liberals for those interested in going to the party's end of July convention.

The meeting starts at 12:30 p.m. at the Terrace Inn.

Coming soon is a nomination date to choose a candidate for the next federal election.

STATE OF THE art community health centre in Stewart is nearing completion. The centre replaces a hospital building heavily damaged in a propane explosion two years ago. And it'll bring together all health and related services in the community. That's Smith Thomson, the hospital's clerk of works, examining the latest progress.

Park Report

by
Greg McDonald

At last...sunglasses, bathing suits, tanning lotion (insect repellent - ick!) but best of all, time to hit the beach or the park for a picnic or an overnight visit. That's right folks it is summer again and here's hoping it's a hot and DRY one. Rain, rain stay away all us folks want to play.

Terrace and area has some great parks for all to enjoy for the day or a couple of weeks. Only 25 km south of Terrace, on Highway 37 is beautiful Lakelse Provincial Park noted for its great swimming, boating, fishing and camping for the entire family.

There are three different lakeside locations for your pleasure. First, there is the picnic site where the trees provide a lovely picnic area right near a well kept beach just right for the kids to frolic in the water. Located nearby along a sandy trail you'll find another lovely beach called Gruchy's which provides excellent swimming, boating and is a great choice for a day time visit to the park. However, if an overnight stay is your pleasure or you are visiting the area the Furlong Bay campsite is the place for you. It has a lovely nature trail where you can explore old growth forests, provides excellent docking facilities for boating or fishing and has great playground areas for the kids.

Plan to be in the park this summer and make sure you join in the fun of the summer interpretative programs. The interpretative programs are designed to provide you with a safe, relaxing and enjoyable time in the park. It will help you gain a deeper understanding of the B.C. Parks commitment to the use of our resources and facilities, as well as, a better appreciation of the natural and cultural resources which are important to the environment.

The interpretative program will feature special programs for kids like Jerry's Rangers and Hug A Tree, Water Safety programs, Environmental games, special interest nights with slide presentations on bear management and salmon enhancement, as well as, good old sit around the campfire events filled with songs and hot chocolate and marshmallows. In addition, there will be special event days - July will feature Parks Day which will be a fun day including a scavenger hunt and a beach barbecue. August features both Trails Day and Family Day with fun activities planned for kids young and old. As well as the Skeena Triathlon starts at the beach with the 1.5 km swim in the bay.

We hope to see you out this summer to the Lakelse Lake Provincial Park and welcome your thoughts on programming events. The evening interpretative programs begin Saturday June 5 at 8 o'clock and day programs begin July 1. In the meantime get out those picnic baskets and tents and get ready!!!

Life protection view promoted

TERRACE — Balancing the budget and protection of life at all stages were two topics raised by this riding's Christian Heritage Party (CHP) candidate at a recent meeting.

Luke Kwantes, from Smithers, said it has been some time since the federal government had a balanced budget.

And he told the meeting that none of the four mainstream parties, including the Reform party, have made a commitment to protect human life at all its stages.

When the CHP met with the Reform Party to discuss a possible amalgamation, the Reformers refused to make "right-to-life" a part of their platform, said Kwantes. Those talks were not successful.

Also speaking was deputy party leader Heather Stilwell who said the CHP is a credible alternative to other Canadian political parties.

"People are beginning to ask their politicians on what principles are they going to make their decisions," she said.

"We are a party that has principles that make good common sense," she said.

These principles include a balanced budget, elimination of the national debt, family values and an anti-abortion stance, added Stilwell.

Stilwell, a Surrey school board member, is known as the "credit card lady" because of her efforts to expose the entertainment spendings of school administrators who billed the amounts to school board credit cards.

Teens help out Cameron

Troubled youths turn to the healing circle

RACIAL TENSIONS between youths are a hot topic in town.

Especially after a non-native Caledonia grad loses his legs beneath a train and the youth charged with attempted murder for pushing him is native.

But according to one group of teens such tensions exist only in the small minds of some parents.

Enter the Responding Teens and Parents Group.

About 15 teens, most native, showed up for a recent meeting of the group to count the money they raised from a May 15 non-alcoholic dance.

Nearly 150 students attended the dance at the arena banquet room and $1,100 was raised.

All of it is ear-marked for a trust fund for Cameron Davis.

Talk around the table is of how they can raise more money for a high-tech wheelchair for him.

"It'd be awesome if we could get the whole amount of the money for him," says one youth.

Youth worker Greg McQuarrie, who participates in the group, says the March 31st accident has been a catalyst for local teens and street kids.

"It gives them the feeling that they can actually do something worthwhile," he explained.

"Everybody was shocked," recalls one teen. "It could have happened to any of us. We just want to find a way to help."

"To us — to people who know him — it's like having your brother there in the hospital with no legs," says another.

And the group says most adults blew the situation out of proportion — and weren't around to help either.

"Where were the parents when this happened?" one demanded. "We had to help each other."

"A lot of kids tried to quit drinking after," another teen recalls.

Some succeeded, some have not.

Many are still troubled and are trying to unlock their feelings.

Fifty-eight students turned up at the Skeena Jr. Secondary gymnasium the weekend after the accident for a healing circle ceremony.

Sweat lodge organizer Joanne Peters and others have held a series of sweat lodges since then for teens troubled by the incident.

The sweat lodge they're using, incidentally, is one Davis helped them build in three-foot deep snow on Jan. 3.

Most of the youths in the group knew Davis before the accident.

They parted with him, and many considered him a friend.

Now they're trying to help him.

"They're being role models for their parents — that's what they're doing," McQuarrie says.

Maria Cavezza

Getting set for Indians

CANADA WORLD Youth project leader Maria Cavezza has arrived in town.

She's making preparations for an exchange of students between Canada and India.

The city will be host to seven Indian students and seven Canadian students.

They arrive in late July and will spend 10 weeks here before going to India in October.

Cavezza is scouting out host families for the exchange students, as well as work placements.

She's also looking for meeting space, and bicycles that the students can borrow.

Anyone that has a class 4 driver's licence and can help with group transportation would also be appreciated.

Cavezza, 26, of Vancouver, is herself a veteran of a Canada World Youth exchange trip to Ghana.

She has also travelled to Europe, Japan and Quebec.

Anyone who can help Cavezza with preparations for the exchange can reach her at 638-0474.

Wiggle it!

AL LEVESQUE of Kilmat's Strictly Country dancers leads Terrace health-seekers in last Wednesday's country line dance in the park, including a few younger dancers who were still learning their steps. Dancing counts as physical activity and residents were each trying to rack up 15 continuous minutes in last week's fitness challenge.

SALVATION ARMY

A changing of the guard

By GLENN DREXHAGE

TERRACE IS losing a pair of lieutenants. The husband and wife team of Lt.

Mike and Lt. Lee Anne Hoeft will be leaving town to take up a new Salvation Army posting in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan.

The couple, who lived in Terrace for three years along with their three-year-old son Matthew and two-year-old daughter Sarah, will be leaving on June 28. A replacement is planned, but no decision has yet been made.

Although the Hoefts were very involved in church and community services while in Terrace, they became committed to the organization much earlier.

Mike Hoeft was born into the church community in Regina in 1965. In 1977, he began work with the Army's summer camp program, held for underprivileged children. He worked with the camp for nine years.

In 1985, Hoeft became employed with the Army, working with family and correctional services.

Lee Anne first became acquainted with the army in 1968/69 when she was placed in one of its children's villages at the age of 11.

She attended the Salvation Army in Toronto, and eventually worked as a secretary for the organization.

She went to training school in 1983, and became an ordained minister two years later.

Lee Anne then went to work in Alberta — first in High River and then in Calgary. From there, she went to Regina, where she met Mike.

The couple married in 1987, and in 1988 they went to training college in Toronto.

"We felt that God had called us to work full-time as ministers," says Mike.

The couple arrived here in July 1990 as a joint appointment. As Mike puts it, they were "green and right out of college."

Such appointments are standard practice within the Salvation Army.

In fact, if a married person wants to become an army officer, then both husband and wife must become officers.

During their stay here, the Hoefts were pastors for the local congregation. They also were involved with social work, by working at the two thrift stores in town and providing various family services.

Mike says that about 20-25 families or family members a month would contact him for services.

In addition, daughter Sarah was born in Terrace.

He notes that after five years in the army, a member usually becomes a captain. However, before this, the person(s) should have worked in at least two different postings.

And so the Hoefts are moving to Saskatchewan.

"It's close to home for me — for my kids it'll be nice to be close to Grandma," says Mike.

However, he will miss his current home.

"It would've been nice to stay another year or two in Terrace — you know people everywhere you go. I'll miss that."

"We really like Terrace. Everything is naturally beautiful."

"What I'm going to miss most is the people in the community."

The family will likely stay longer in Prince Albert — about four or five years, says Mike. After that, they will continue to move to different places for five-year blocks.

The Salvation Army is located in 96 different countries. In Canada alone, there are 1500 army offices.

So far, Mike has found the work very rewarding.

"I've had a lot of opportunity in Terrace to be with people at a critical point of need. You're there to help them through difficult situations. It gives a sense of satisfaction."

"I'm grateful to the people of Terrace for all of their support."

Slimy memories sought

PORT EDWARD — Ever worked the slime line in a north coast cannery? Ever pulled roe, or packed eggs for a living?

Then Gladys Blyth and the Oral History Committee of the North Pacific Cannery Village Museum Society in Port Edward wants to hear from you.

Blyth, the author of Salmon Canneries, British Columbia North Coast and A History of Port Edward, 1907-1970, hopes to put together a historical description of the life-style and culture of cannery workers all along the coast.

The committee wants to get at least 100 interviews with people who lived and worked at the canneries, focusing on seniors who lived the lifestyle from childhood to retirement.

Seven of the 10 people on the committee are themselves seniors who will be looking at both the social and technical aspects of working at a fish cannery.

"Much of the history to date is from the manager's point of view," Blyth said. "We would like to do a cross-cultural oral history of cannery village life."

By focusing on north coast canneries, Blyth hopes to find more people who remember such a life. "Further south, much of the populations with this life-style have dispersed," she noted.

The results of the oral interviews will be transcribed and stored at the North Coast Cannery Museum archives.

The history committee received $5,700 from the federal government's New Horizon's Project, a program for seniors.

To contact the committee, call Jean Rysstad at 624-6312.

B.C. Festival of the Arts

Trail tops for actors

The B.C. Festival of the Arts in Trail was a fabulous experience for a group of Terrace performers.

Natalie Dickson was noted for her artistic excellence in junior brass.

And Caledonia students Louie Pelletier and Melanie Conrad say they were exposed to some of the province's leaders in drama at the three-day festival in Trail.

Conrad and Pelletier brought their high school zone drama fest-winning performance of Where Have All the Lightning Bugs Gone? to Trail.

In addition to an adjudicator's assessment of their work, the duo took part in a number of workshops, including stage fighting.

They also met one of the actors from CBC-TV's teen drama Northwood.

Many, many top-calibre performers from around the province were at the festival, he said.

"There's a lot of great plays out there," Pelletier says, "And 75 per cent of the people there want to be actors."

That's a tough field to crack, but it doesn't deter him.

"I'm going there," he says.

She wouldn't change a thing

Happy birthday!
Hazelton pioneer Jessie Morrison Gould (nee Smith) celebrated her 84th birthday on June 6.

Jessie has had a long and fascinating life.

She was born in 1909 in Prince Rupert, the baby daughter of Peter and Annie Smith.

Her parents married in 1908 in Scotland, after which they came straight to Prince Rupert.

Her father, a well-travelled man, had come to work on the Grand Trunk Pacific railroad along with many other Scots.

Her parents travelled by boat to Montreal, and then made their way to Vancouver by train. From there, they took the boat to Prince Rupert.

In Nov. 1912, Jessie and her parents travelled on the very first train that came as far as the tracks would go, ending up in New Hazelton.

The Grand Trunk railroad built a warehouse in New Hazelton to store railroad ties and other supplies. Peter Smith was in charge of the warehouse.

By March 1912, trains were operating only as far as the Skeena crossing, because of a delay at the crossing bridge.

The "Inlander" riverboat made its last trip up the Skeena in May 1912. It was the last of the riverboats to travel up the Skeena in those years.

On April 5, 1914, the first train met from east and west near Fraser Lake. The last spike was driven, and the first through-train reached Prince Rupert on April 8, 1914.

Back to Peter and Annie Smith - when they first came to New Hazelton in 1912, they lived in a little log cabin near the railroad.

Along with other Scottish families, the Smiths were members of the Presbyterian church. Church services were first held in a tent. Later, Donald McLeod was responsible for the building.

Apparently, a minister by the name of McLean had come with his gun and shot at the robbers. McLean soon became known as the "shooting preacher."

of the first Presbyterian church in New Hazelton.

The little church was also used as a school during weekdays. Jessie started school in 1915. Her first teacher was Thomas MacMartin.

Jessie also remembers the first bank robbery in New Hazelton. It was a Monday morning.

Jessie's mother was washing some Hudson Bay blankets in a wash tub. Little Jessie was holding the end of the blanket, helping pull it through the hand wringer, when they heard some shots coming from the Union Bank down the road.

Apparently, a minister by the name of McLean had come with his gun and shot at the robbers. McLean soon became known as the "shooting preacher."

Jessie said she has seen New Hazelton rise and fall three times since she has lived there.

Jessie also belonged to the first girl guides group, and her leader was Mrs. Harris. When Jessie was 16 years old, she was crowned the 1925 May Queen by Dr. Wrinch.

Jessie met her husband, Harold

Oddfellows head visits

Contributed

The Terrace Odd Fellows Rebekah Association hosted a May 24 visit of Grand Master Gordon Thompson and Grand Marshall Jay Harper of the Grand Lodge Independent Order of Odd Fellows of British Columbia.

The visitors were very impressed by their tour of the Terrace and Lakelse Lake area.

The weather was ideal for scenic photos.

A gathering of the lodges enjoyed a delicious evening meal after which Thompson outlined the work of the lodges.

International projects being carried out include:

- World Eye Bank.
- An education foundation.
- World hunger and disaster assistance.
- A United Nations pilgrimage for youth.

A drive for new members is now underway. For more information contact Jim MacKay at 635-3995 or 635-6770.

"Here 'n There"

by Yvonne Moen

Gould, who had come from North Battleford, Sask. They fell in love and married Feb. 17, 1932 in Smithers.

Harold was working at the Diamond D ranch, east of Telkwa. They lived there until 1935, and then moved back to Hazelton.

In 1940, Harold went to work in the maintenance department at Wrinch Memorial Hospital.

He travelled back and forth by bicycle, even during a very bad winter.

Harold attached a can full of sand to his bike, which would sprinkle sand ahead of him as he rode his bike.

The family moved in 1941 to live in the little house beside the hospital, and Jessie is still living there today. Harold passed away in 1980.

The couple had five children - three sons (Allan, Danny and Ted) and two daughters (Ann and Sandra). Sandra lives in Terrace.

While living in Hazelton, Jessie has been very involved with the community. She received an honorary membership to the Mountain View United Church in recognition for more than 50 years of faithful service.

She also received a lifetime membership to the Hazelton hospital auxiliary for her dedication, and was awarded an old-limer award.

Jessie has probably lived longer in New Hazelton than anybody else.

Her father passed away in 1961, at the age of 86, and her 83-year-old mother died in 1964. Jessie's brothers and sisters - John, Charles, Kenneth, Katherine, Nellie and Marjorie - were all born in New Hazelton. All of her children were born there as well, except for Dan, who was born in Smithers.

Jessie has 16 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren. She says her life in New Hazelton has been good.

If she had her life to live over again, she wouldn't change anything, even if she had to go through all the hard work that she faced as a pioneer lady.

8 Glasses A Day Water Facts

What Is Spring Water?

Springs are created when ground water flows naturally to the surface. Sometimes water from a spring has traveled many kilometers and outflow is often affected by rain or snow melt.

Many people assume that underground water is safe from contamination. According to Environment Canada, contamination occurs when toxic substances accidentally leak into the ground water zone. Contamination also results from on overabundance of naturally occurring iron and manganese and substances such as arsenic. Certain gases such as radon or methane sometimes cause problems. Sea water also may cause problems but this is more common in coastal areas.

For domestic use, 26% of all Canadians rely on ground water, which, if contaminated, poses difficult clean up problems.

Cubs take in Kikatee

Contributed

Nineteen wolf cubs from Terrace travelled to Smithers to take part in Camp Kikatee.

Kikatee is a camp put on for wolf cubs here in the northwest and is hosted by various communities' scout councils.

The nine cubs of the First Terrace Cubs and ten of the Seventh Terrace arrived with their leaders at the camp site — the Smithers Fall Fair grounds on Friday, May 28.

The cubs set up their campsites and went for a quick supper. Later that night there was an informal campfire held, with the formal campfire Saturday night.

Saturday kept the cubs busy all day long with many activities, including a compass course/hike, sense testing, an obstacle course, screen painting, making a 'paw' print, plaster cast moulding and a craft session.

Several games were also included in the weekend's activities.

Many cubs said they enjoyed the obstacle course with its bosens chair most of all, but they had fun with all the camp activities.

More than 140 cubs, leaders, parent helpers and staff attended the camp.

Each participant received a T-shirt with a camp logo on it and were encouraged to get as many people as possible to sign the shirt.

The camp ran from the 28th to the 30th of May.

Closing ceremonies were held on the 30th with the overall tidy camper award going to Kitwanga.

All cubs becoming scouts next year were also recognized.

Plans are already in the works for Camp Kikatee 1994 in Prince Rupert next year.

Take it off slowly

FAST AND furious weight loss is out. Today, smart people take it off slow and easy.

They know that the faster the pounds come off, the faster they are likely to go back on.

When calories drop too low, your body may say, "You can't do that, you're starving me."

To compensate, your metabolic rate drops and you burn fewer calories.

Repeating this process of weight loss and weight gain a time or two could make you a victim of the yo-yo syndrome of weight cycling.

Your metabolic rate slows and you can increase your risk of developing high blood pressure or heart disease.

If your weight is higher after each cycle, your self-esteem will go down as your weight goes up. Your best "healthy weight" may be the weight that you can best maintain.

A weight that's stable may be the healthiest weight in the long run.

Take responsibility for your new healthier lifestyle. Get support from like-minded people with whom you frequently share meals or walks.

Let's look at a common sense approach to weight control to help prevent weight cycling.

Because you are unique, you need a weight loss program that suits you.

If you have a medical condition such as diabetes or heart disease, a Registered Dietitian can help you get started.

Ask your physician for a referral to the outpatient dietitian at your local hospital or see a dietitian in private practice.

If you are in general good health, here are two keys to help you reach and maintain a healthy weight: exercise regularly and eat well.

You will get the results you want — lose weight and keep it off.

Eating is fun, but be aware of what you are eating.

A simple rule is to eat a wide variety of food — but eat everything in moderation.

Have plenty of whole grain foods, legumes, vegetables and fruits. Always choose low fat

Nutrition Notes

by Gerry Kasten

foods, lean meats, and low fat dairy products. Bake, steam, broil or microwave food using little or no added fat.

Books like Anne Lindsay's "Lighthearted Everyday Cooking" and "The Lighthearted Cookbook" will give you ideas for low fat cooking and recipes. Magazines such as "Cooking Light" or "Eating Well" have delicious recipes and great ideas for cooking without extra fat.

Start today. Seize every opportunity to enjoy some exercise. Begin slowly and increase your activities gradually.

Shun the elevator, walk up those stairs, and get off the bus a few blocks from your home. Enjoy a walk with friends.

Choose any exercise you like, but do it. Because lean muscle tissue is metabolically active, your metabolic rate will increase as you build up muscle.

As your percentage of body fat drops with exercise, you will burn more calories. This means that you can either eat more and remain at the same weight level, or lose weight more easily.

Be self-assured. You are the boss. Take responsibility for your new healthier lifestyle. Get support from like-minded people with whom you frequently share meals or walks.

Just remember that gradual changes are more likely to be life-long changes.

For more helpful tips on weight control call Dial-A-Dietitian at 732-9191 in the Greater Vancouver Area or 1-800-667-3438 toll free (that's 1-800-667-DIET) in the rest of B.C.

HELPING HANDS

CALEDONIA CONSTRUCTION 12 students Sean Bujtas, Joey Watts, Jon Hildebrandt, and Randy Menz are building this table to be auctioned off in support of the Children's Haven Project in Olinda, Brazil. Project organizer Bob Bussanich says construction is nearing completion on the new school house for street kids there. They're expecting to get word shortly of a quadrupling of matching funds from CIDA for the project. It's basically a transitional school and eight of the street kids who have started there have now moved on to public school.

Watch TV viewing

HOW DOES watching TV affect your children?

Without even talking about what they are watching (the violence, and the morals), TV watching can have a lot of effects on health all by itself.

The most notable thing about television is the relationship between too much TV and being overweight. A variety of studies have shown that the more people watch TV, the more likely they are to be overweight. On the average, children spend about 22 to 25 hours a week watching television. Compare that to about 25 hours per week in school!

And there are other statistics: about one third of children have no limits whatsoever placed on their TV watching. In 16% of homes the television is on all day long. Preschoolers are likely to watch much more TV than school age children.

Men who watch more than three hours of TV a day are twice as likely to be overweight than those who watch less than an hour. The people who did the study weren't sure whether this was because men who watch TV a lot are less active, or if they tend to eat more high calorie foods. Some people even think it's a combination of these two things.

On the other hand, a study that looked at how much TV children watched found that the more TV kids watched, the heavier they were likely to be. Some studies found that the chances of teens being overweight increased by about 2% for each hour of television watched per day.

The relationship between TV and being overweight has a lot to do with the inactivity of watching television. But you also have to look at the amount and types of foods eaten while watching.

Many of the foods advertised on TV are high in calories, and particularly high in fat.

Not only does television influence what we eat while we're watching it, but it also influences what we buy at the grocery store. Most parents are familiar with the pressures a child can bring to bear to purchase an advertised product.

So what to do about television?

Try limiting TV watching to those programs which you and your child have agreed upon. Allow time for special programming, but discourage watching TV for long periods of time.

Watch shows with your children, and talk about the content of the shows. Ask them what they think, and tell them how you feel. Point out the differences between social reality and TV. If a social problem is shown on TV, talk about how it was solved, and discuss how it might be solved in real life.

To reduce excess viewing, try keeping your TV in a location where it won't be turned on except when someone wants to watch a specific program.

There's a variety of excellent programming available, but it's mixed into a wide spectrum of other shows. Educating yourself about what your child is watching and setting clear limits on TV watching time can help you guide your child through this video jungle. Good luck.

Did you know that...

BASEMENT HOME IDEAL FOR THOSE JUST STARTING OUT

By M. Tynan

At 38'-0" wide and only 45'-6" deep, this home will fit on a variety of lots, and is specifically suited to a hillside lot which slopes from the back down to the front. Low square footage should keep construction costs down, while a stylish and efficient design keeps equity rising.

The exterior features an elegant raised entrance and a fashionable palladian style window. A centred garage provides an interesting visual departure from the average basement home.

Enter into a foyer open to the second storey and brightened by an overhead window. A good sized unfinished basement area can be finished when time and finances allow. Upstairs, the living room features a vaulted ceiling, a window seat, and a cosy gas fireplace. One can look down over a railing to the foyer below. A country kitchen has plenty of cupboard and counter space and a handy breakfast bar.

Two secondary bedrooms share a three piece bath. The master features a four piece ensuite with double sinks and an extra wide shower.

Plans for GL-618 may be obtained for $335.00 for a package of five complete sets of working prints and $29.00 for each additional set of the same plan. Allow $15.00 extra to cover the cost of postage and handling (B.C. residents add applicable sales tax to plan total) (All Canadian residents add 7% GST to plan total plus postage and handling).

This is one of our new designs. Many innovative plans are now available in our NEW Basement Entry plan catalogue for $9.98 including postage and handling and 7% GST.

Skeena Angler

Rob
Brown

THE ENVIRONMENT ministry recently commissioned a study to determine if live capture salmon fishing is feasible in B.C.

The consultants concluded fish traps, fish wheels, reef nets and modified seining were the methods holding the most promise.

Fish traps are floating mazes -- a series of enclosures getting progressively smaller until they reach a place where the salmon are penned.

The fish are guided into the device by the use of a barrier and once in the funnel, instinct leads to entrapment.

Fish traps have been used for centuries. Natives fishing B.C. rivers once made extensive use of traps and weirs.

Adopted by the commercial fishermen of Washington State in the late 1800s, traps were providing fish to 15 canneries a century later.

Seining is the most widespread fishing technique used today. The seiner encircles fish then draws the ends of the net together, progressively confining the fish until they can be brought aboard.

Using this approach, target fish can be selected from non-target fish, provided there is time given to sort them.

Unfortunately, things do not work that way in our seine fisheries. Hydraulic systems used to haul fish over a drop ramp on the stern cause stress and mortality to fish.

In short openings where time is big money, there is little chance commercial fishermen are going to adopt techniques requiring more time and leading to a reduced catch.

New regulations demanding the use of power blocks -- which greatly increases the time required to haul the net -- and mandatory sorting of large catches would mean seining could be done in highly selective manner.

This is how it's done in Alaska much to the consternation of many fishermen there who would love to get out from under their regulations and adopt the ecologically insensitive, but more efficient drum seiners of B.C.

The use of a modified net may hold some promise. The report suggests a variant of a Mediterranean squid net, called the lampara, may be worth looking into.

The lampara consists of two wings and bag with a floor or apron across the bottom. Fish collect in the bag as the net is pulled in and are prevented from escaping by the apron and wings. Mortality is low.

Reef nets are another technology pioneered by natives. Funnel-like contraptions, they are set in migratory fish paths. Reef boats used today are equipped with live holding tanks, the largest capable of holding 800 fish.

However, with the opportunity to make more money gillnetting and seining the number of reef netters declined.

It's interesting that in 1991 the Washington State Fisheries Department, worried about the health of their coho stocks, shut down gillnet, seine and troll fleets, yet allowed the reef boats to continue fishing.

Fishwheels are another hoary technology. Natives used them and years later Columbia River commercial fishermen landed tonnes and tonnes of salmon with them.

Like traps, fishwheels are used in conjunction with leads or barriers that herd the catch into the river-driven rotating baskets of the wheel.

And, after some experimentation it appears lowering gillnets 1.2 meters below their float lines may reduce the catch of steelhead travelling in clear water. Because the use of these weed-lines would also reduce the sockeye catch, the commercial fishermen continue to resist them.

The Atlantic salmon were so heavily fished the commercial fishery for them had to be shut down.

With that kind of handwriting on the wall, you'd think commercial fishermen of the west coast would be aggressively pursuing selective harvesting methods.

Only in this way will they secure their livelihoods.

But no, instead of innovation and creativity, the commercial fishers cling doggedly to archaic, insensitive harvesting methods.

Classic win for Simpson

Sunny weather and a repeat win for one of Terrace's own gave the crowd lots to smile about at this year's Kermode Classic run.

Sue Simpson successfully defended her 10km women's title, coming in more than a minute and a half clear of nearest rival Cheryl Martello of Prince Rupert.

She also shrugged off the heat to clip more than a minute off her '92 winning time.

In the men's 10km it was Smithers' turn to celebrate as Richard Harrison, the one to beat in the northwest, cruised to an equally comfortable win in 34:15, just 28 seconds shy of last year's record-breaking time.

The share-out continued in the women's 5km event where Prince Rupert's Cheryl Steele crossed the line in 22:19, just 17 seconds clear of fellow coast city runner Kerri Finnigan.

And Kevin Silversen, 16, took a title home to Telkwa, winning the men's short course in 16:54, 29 seconds clear of Terrace's Ed Ansems.

The under-13s age category provided the day's most exciting finishes in both women's and men's.

Rachel Wilkerson, despite improving nearly a minute on her '92 winning time, only just held off fellow Terracite Bridget DeJong by a scant four seconds.

And Nathan Northridge also found himself hard-pressed to repeat, Kevin Gillanders and Christopher Mantel finishing just 18 and 27 seconds back, respectively.

Among other strong hometown performances was Heidi Siebring's fourth place overall finish in the women's 5km in which Marsh Cater and Karen Kelly crossed in 7th and 9th respectively.

Gord Buxton took fifth spot in the men's 10km and Dave Cater, Collin Veilleux, Murray Warner, Larry Bolingbroke and Gary Pettipas all produced top-10 5km finishes.

Diana Wood, Gail Sheasby and Kerry Paulis were also top-tenners in the women's 10km.

Neil Fleischmann took top spot in the men's 45-49 years 10km division, Jodi Whiting placed second in the women's 16-19 years 5km and Marilyn Earl was runner-up in the women's 40 years and up short course.

Paul Clark was the lone wheelchair entry, pulling his young son around the 5km course in a time of 16:59.

More than 175 runners and walkers entered the two events while the enthusiastic youngsters in the 1km boosted the total well over the 200 mark.

The event, the largest of its kind in the north, drew entries from Prince Rupert to Smithers and north to New Aiyansh and Gitwinksihkw.

SLO-PITCH

SKB slumber ends

Someone just woke up the sleeping giant!

The SKB Wreckers last week served notice on the Men's Slo-Pitch league they are back on track.

Dominant in league action last year, the Wreckers opened the '93 campaign with a pair of 7-0 losses.

Even in winning their first - May 28 against leaders Rudon - SKB had to come from behind in the last inning to eke out a 7-6 victory.

But the bats finally started booming last week as the wrecking crew blasted in 37 runs in just two games.

First to be bludgeoned were Terrace Paving, victimized 21-2. SKB then felled Rudon 16-5 to grab a share of top spot.

Next to feel the fury of the Wreckers attack will be cellar-dweller Back Eddy when the two meet next Monday at 7:45 p.m.

SKB will be trying to wipe out the memory of that earlier 7-0 shutout by the Pub.

For their part, Back Eddy will be trying to get it together again after being blanked 9-0 by Rudon and then losing a 9-8 thriller to Terrace Paving.

That win allowed the road crew to pull Back Eddy down to share the basement spot.

Before that, however, the Pub has another tough game to get through. They face West Point, SKB's main rivals in '92, Friday night at 6:30 p.m.

With West Point set to play Rudon next Monday night at the same time, the league may start to shake down into what could prove to be the season's pattern.

At the moment, however, with all five times separated by just a single game, it could hardly be closer.

League spokesman Bob Dempster pointed out anyone is welcome to come down to Riverside Park, at the end of Legion Ave., and catch the action.

Game nights are Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and a quick check of the Sports Menu will show who's playing and at what time.

FOLLOWING in Mom's footsteps (actually just ahead of her in the photo above) is Scott Simpson. He was so determined to get in on the Kermode Classic 1km action, he fudged his age on the entry form. Although the number on his chest says '5', he's really only two but he wasn't going to let his lack of years stop him. The warm-up he gave Mom must have worked. Sue Simpson went on to win the women's 10km in a faster time than last year. Of course the Classic is as much about participation as it is times and the ladies at left were among those who enjoyed putting the accent on the former. Above left are Cheryl Steele, first overall in the women's 5km, and Richard Harrison, repeat winner in the men's 10km.

SAFE! Kitwanga-Hazleton's third baseman has no play as the Terrace runner handily beats the throw from left. The Saturday morning game was the first in the boys fastball zone playoffs for a B.C. Summer Games berth. Kitimat and Houston rounded out the contenders. Results in next week's Standard.

Icy August is certain!

August: a time when most people think in terms of strapping on water skis, not lacing up ice skates.

But that's just what up to 300 youngsters will be doing as they prepare to hit the ice at the sixth annual Terrace Summer Hockey School.

Spokesman Jake DeJong said 284 kids took advantage of the opportunity last year and that sort of turnout is expected this time.

They will be split into four age groups: up to eight years, 9-10 years, 11-12s and 13 years and up.

DeJong said the ages in last year's enrolment ranged from five to 16.

On hand to pass on their knowledge and skills will be eleven instructors including Wade Flaherty and Jeff Sharples.

Teammates with the Kansas City Blades, the San Jose Shark International League farm team, both have also seen National Hockey League action.

Flaherty has stepped between the pipes for the Sharks while Sharples patrolled the blue line for the Detroit Red Wings.

Add in Shane Maitland, Jason Krug, Tony Hildebrand, Ian Al-those present get both on- and off-ice tuition in the game's finer points.

The school also offers after-hours game action each night, DeJong pointed out.

Anyone aged 16 years and up can sign up for the summer ger, Trevor Hendry, Mario Desjardins, Davey Jones, Rod Philpot and Simon Dodd and there's little doubt the kids are going to learn a lot.

The school runs in two sessions, the first Aug. 16-21, the other Aug. 23-28 and participants can register for either or both at a cost of $110 per week.

Each day begins at 8 a.m. and ends at 8 p.m. during which time league where contact hockey is the name of the game.

The recreational league offers adults a chance to enjoy the non-contact version.

The cost in both cases is $30 per week and again players can register for either or both.

While these games are enjoyable for instructors like Flaherty, DeJong pointed out there's a serious side to them as well.

"These guys have got to stay in shape," he explained. The work involved in teaching and playing actual games effectively acted as a training program for the instructor/players.

If there wasn't that opportunity in their home town, he added, they would have to spend their summers where they had an opportunity to keep up the necessary level of fitness.

Flaherty, for example, would be putting in two weeks work at Victoria just prior to the Terrace school.

"These guys just can't sit around all summer," DeJong said.

And sitting around is not something the hockey school participants will get a chance to do either.

For more information on the school, phone DeJong at 635-6735, Betty Anne Muller (635-3884) or Cliff Sharples (635-6735).

Records fall as racers burn up track

It's going to be a long, hot season: as in hot drivers, hot cars and hot times.

At only the second meet of the new stock car season, records fell and fell again.

Ernie Perkins set the stage in Saturday's Sportsman class, scoring round the track in 17:19 seconds to flame the old mark of 17:28.

Fast as that was, the new time didn't last long. Perkins went back out the following day and lowered it again with a 17:14 circuit.

Not to be left out, Brent McCarron and Warren Lindsay both turned in record-breaking performances in the A Hobby class.

McCarron's 19:02 time smoked the previous best of 19:17 while Lindsay also snuck in under the old mark with a 19:16 lap.

For McCarron, the record crowned a perfect six-for-six performance which took his season tally to eight wins in nine races.

Off to the same kind of start is Major Craig in the A Street category. Following his opening day sweep, Craig guided #777 to five weekend wins with only Darcy McKeown in Saturday's Main able to beat him to the chequered flag.

The triple-7 beat the pack four more times over the two day meet, this time in B Street with Joe Botz behind the wheel.

After taking the Dash on Saturday, Botz continued his impressive start to the season by sweeping all three events the following day.

Honours were evenly split in the C Hobby class, Elizabeth Cloakey, Dawn Tomas and Leslie Lynch each picking up a pair.

Jennifer Darby had the edge in C Street action, winning four of six including a Saturday sweep while Shelley Reinhardt sped to Heat and Main wins Sunday.

Below, full results for the meet. Terrace Speedway will be the scene of more action this Saturday and Sunday.

Charges, chants..and fun!

Parkside had it all

IT'S PROBABLY the biggest sports meet of the year held here. And it's definitely the loudest, which is what you'd expect when more than 500 voices are raised to cheer on their favourites. Last Friday's Parkside Cross Country run, the sixth annual, drew 585 entrants from E.T. Kenney, Kiti K'Shan, Copper Mountain, Clarence Michiel, Uplands, Thornhill Primary and Elementary, Veritas and Centennial Christian schools. From the cavalry charge start (above) to private duels on the back stretch (at left), the participants gave it their all and enjoyed every stride. Everyone got a "You Did It" certificate and their were special certificates for the top 10 finishers in each age group.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Lorie Parr and the staff at Erwin's Jewellers would like to congratulate Emily Des Biens of Terrace, who was the Grand Prize winner of a fabulous Diamond Cluster Ring in their "Win Beyond Wishes, Save Beyond Your Dreams" promotion.

Dear Eldon

"Even as we dream, we begin to succeed... Even as we succeed, we begin to dream again."

May today's success be only the beginning of a lifetime of dreams come true.

Congratulations,
Uncle Peter, Auntie Laurie-Ann, Dustin, Leland, Baden & Elaine

You go by Shawn,
But we know you're Percy.
And the ravages of time,
Have shown no mercy.

You're tummy's expanding,
You're hair's thinning
And with the battle of old age,
Your not winning.

Happy 40th

CONGRATULATIONS SHIRLEY

Let us tell you a story
Of a woman we know
Who decided at age 47
Off to University she would go.

Shirley worked 25 years as a nurse
Took a leave from her job
With some cash in her purse
Off to University she drove.

She completed each term
With exhaustion and glee
And drove back to Mills Hospital
Where she worked for a fee.

Shirley did this at Christmas
And again at year end
Back and forth she drove
So University she could attend.

Shirley worked really hard
To many she's friends
With much regret we say
Her time in Terrace comes to an end.

We will miss you dear friend
To Vancouver Shirley will move
To a brand new career
And we all do approve.

On May 28 Shirley received her degree.
BUT ON MAY 27 SHIRLEY TURNED 50.

CONGRATULATIONS AND MANY
HAPPY RETURNS DEAR FRIEND.

LOVE AND BEST WISHES FOR THE NEXT 50 YEARS.

Reform

PUBLIC MEETING

The Select Standing Committee on Parliamentary Reform, Ethical Conduct, Standing Orders and Private Bills has been authorized by the Legislative Assembly to examine all matters and issues arising out of the two referenda questions presented to voters in the general provincial election on October 17, 1991:

1. Should voters be given the right, by legislation, to vote between elections for the removal of their Member of the Legislative Assembly? (Recall)
2. Should voters be given the right, by legislation, to propose questions that the Government of British Columbia must submit to voters by referendum? (Initiative)

The Committee would like to hear your views through a series of public meetings being held throughout the province. These meetings are intended to provide the Members of the Committee and the public an opportunity to engage in a discussion about all aspects of recall and initiative in British Columbia.
